

EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP, ED.D.

The educational leadership program at Saint Louis University's School of Education (<https://www.slu.edu/education/>) is a long-standing, highly respected graduate program preparing educational leaders through a professional educational doctorate.

SLU's Doctor of Education in Educational Leadership is designed to prepare students to become executive-level educational leaders. Students enter the program with a master's or specialist degree in educational leadership or related field.

The concentration in Catholic education is designed to prepare students to become executive-level leaders in Catholic education. Coursework engages students with the unique aspects of Catholic educational leadership including spiritual leadership and the vocation of a Catholic school leader, and non-public school administration such as funding mechanisms and applicable laws.

Curriculum Overview

The Doctor of Education in Educational Leadership degree requires the completion of 38-44 credits of coursework, a comprehensive written examination, an oral examination and a doctoral project. Students entering with a specialist degree complete 28-34 credits of coursework.

Course offerings are aligned with the state requirements for accreditation, as well as course requirements students must have to qualify for certification. Those courses are set up over a three-year cycle so all entering students have access to the courses they need. The doctoral project is designed to address a problem of practice and is completed by a team. Additionally, each member prepares an individual analysis report.

In the Catholic education concentration, the doctoral project is designed to address a problem of practice in Catholic educational leadership. The project is completed by a group of cohort members as a team. Additionally, each member prepares an individual analysis report.

Fieldwork and Research Opportunities

The program includes site-based activities aligned with coursework as well as the three-credit hour internship required for certification.

In the Catholic education concentration, students complete a practicum requiring involvement in school-site leadership activities at multiple schools. Catholic education students seeking Missouri certification as a superintendent must complete an additional site-based internship.

Careers

This Ed.D. prepares students to be executive-level leaders such as school district superintendents, assistant superintendents, directors, teacher leaders, and/or organizational leaders, as well as strengthening the knowledge and skills of building-level leaders. It prepares students for possible faculty positions in colleges and universities. Additionally, some doctoral students design a special individualized program to prepare for the principalship or a leadership role in a nonprofit, medical, or business organization.

Possible career paths for someone pursuing the concentration in Catholic education include school president, (arch)diocesan superintendent, assistant superintendent, school director, curriculum director, or other central office positions, as well as strengthening the knowledge and skills of experienced building-level leaders.

Program Notes

The Educational Doctorate in Educational Leadership cohort program in Catholic school leadership includes outcomes aligned with national and state standards as well as those articulated by the Catholic Church. Courses are taught as part of a cohort program that is enhanced by problem-based learning, evidence-based content that connects theory and practice, and opportunities for practice.

Students engage in professional learning by collaborating with peers using problem-oriented instructional strategies, studying a curriculum grounded in the literature on effective practice, and engaging in professionally-guided practice in schools.

All courses for both public school and Catholic school leadership are taught in a four-Saturday format (fall and spring), and in an eight-week period spanning mid-May to mid-July in the summer.

Catholic coursework engages students with the unique aspects of Catholic educational leadership such as including spiritual leadership and the vocation of a Catholic school leader, and non-public school administration such as funding mechanisms and applicable laws.

Coursework engages students with the unique aspects of Catholic educational leadership including spiritual leadership, the vocation of the Catholic school educator, and the evangelizing Catholic school, and non-public school administration such as recruitment, funding mechanisms, and laws applicable in religious schools, while preparing students to take the assessments for superintendent certification. Students seeking Missouri state certification as a superintendent may be required to take additional coursework.

The degree additionally requires the completion of a written comprehensive examination, a doctoral project and an oral examination.
