NURSING, PH.D.

Saint Louis University’s Doctor of Philosophy in Nursing program prepares nurses as scholars and beginning nurse scientists who will contribute to the continued knowledge development of the discipline and profession of nursing.

The program, offered at the Trudy Busch Valentine School of Nursing, takes place in both a traditional classroom format and distance learning with live, real-time digital conferencing.

Program Highlights
SLU’s Doctor of Philosophy in Nursing features:

- Full- and part-time curriculum plans
- Bachelor of Science in Nursing (B.S.N.) and Master of Science in Nursing (M.S.N.) entry options
- Responsive faculty who are nationally recognized for teaching excellence, nursing leadership, scholarly research and student mentorship
- Faculty advisers who are individually assigned to mentor each student throughout the program
- Access to an online library
- An online writing center
- State-of-the-art teaching facilities

Curriculum Overview
Students can enter SLU’s Doctor of Philosophy in Nursing through one of two programs: the post-baccalaureate to Ph.D. track (B.S.N to Ph.D.), or the post-master’s to Ph.D. track (M.S.N to Ph.D.).

Both options offer the choice of taking classes on campus or at a distance. Distance students interact live with students on campus through online conferencing software.

Most doctoral-level nursing classes are offered on Friday mornings and afternoons during fall and spring semesters. The scheduled time for the class takes into consideration students in different time zones. The academic year also includes two shorter, intensive courses, taken over the summer on Fridays.

The Doctor of Philosophy in Nursing requires 51 credits of doctoral coursework (plus a maximum of 18 credits accepted from a master’s program) and 12 credits of dissertation research.

Careers
Graduates with a Ph.D. in nursing are prepared for careers as nurse scientists, nurse researchers and nurse educators.
