Description
In 2013, the College for Public Health and Social Justice (CPHSJ) was established, unifying Saint Louis University’s School of Public Health, the School of Social Work, and the criminology and criminal justice program. The social work program was established in 1930 and the M.S.W. program was first accredited that same year. It became an autonomous School of Social Service in 1964. The School of Public Health was established in 1991 and undergraduate degree programs in public health and health management date back to 2007.

The college is committed to a strong Jesuit tradition of caring and advocating for the underserved and marginalized. Each major requires a minimum of 120 credits for graduation. Service learning, practicum, immersion trips, and the opportunity to study on the Madrid Campus are additional features of the undergraduate program.

The College for Public Health and Social Justice is composed of five departments and one school that administer the academic programs and conduct state-of-the-art research.

Mission
Based on a commitment of service to others, the College for Public Health and Social Justice improves health and well-being locally, nationally and internationally through unique interdisciplinary approaches that inspire students, generate knowledge and engage individuals and communities.

Accreditation
The College for Public Health and Social Justice is fully accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH).
