WGST 2100 - Introduction to Sexuality Studies
Credit(s): 3 Credits
This course examines the lived practices, social meanings, and cultural representations of human sexuality. This introduction to the interdisciplinary field of sexuality studies samples a variety of intellectual approaches in examining sexuality as a source of personal and community identity and as contested political and ideological terrain. No prerequisites.
Attributes: Women's & Gender Studies

WGST 2200 - Race, Gender, and the Ethics of Health Care
Credit(s): 3 Credits
This course uses a multidisciplinary perspective to examine unequal access to and treatment by the health care system in the U.S. Without discounting other social identities, we will focus on race/ethnicity and gender as major determinants of people's disparate experiences with health care. The course will analyze aspects of the health care system that routinely give rise to these experiences, and examine how they help produce and perpetuate racial and gender inequality. The course will also raise questions about what counts as justice and individual rights, and discuss current policies and conditions through an ethical lens. (Offered occasionally)

WGST 2400 - Gender and Popular Culture
Credit(s): 3 Credits
Popular culture provides the stories and images that enable us to imagine and practice femininities and masculinities. This course explores popular culture's influence on understandings of gender and its intersections with other identity markers and focuses on how feminist concepts raise awareness of discrimination and oppression in pop culture.
Attributes: Core:Aesthetics, Hist & Culture, Core:Identities in Context, Women's & Gender Studies

WGST 2550 - Gender, Identity & Literature
Credit(s): 3 Credits
This course introduces literary study within the context and theme of Gender and Identity. Through the reading of a wide variety of genres - including drama, poetry, and fiction - the course engages students in literary ways of knowing. Methods include close reading, comparative textual analysis, and argumentative writing.
Attributes: Women's & Gender Studies

WGST 2700 - Feminisms in the U.S.: Intersectional Approaches
Credit(s): 3 Credits
This course introduces students to different interpretations of feminism across ethnicities, cultures, and nationalities in the U.S. We take as our starting point the intersection of major systems of oppression such as gender, race, sexuality, class, colonialism and nation, and explore how different racial and ethnic communities respond to those systems when developing feminist consciousness. This survey of intellectual work, activist movements, and worldmaking places the work of women of color and indigenous women at the center of efforts for gender justice.
Attributes: Core:Aesthetics, Hist & Culture, Core:Identities in Context, Core:Reflection-in-Action, Diversity in the US (A&S), Women's & Gender Studies

WGST 2800 - Men and Masculinities
Credit(s): 3 Credits
The course introduces research on men and masculinity, and gender more generally, and explores from a feminist perspective the personal and political issues this research – and the current state of our world – raise for men and women. Topics include socialization, college life, media, personal relations, politics, sports, and war. Cross-listed with POLS 2800.
Attributes: Core:Aesthetics, Hist & Culture, Women's & Gender Studies

Attributes: Women's & Gender Studies
WGST 5290 - Women and Global Issues
Credit(s): 3 Credits
In this class, we will explore how globalization is bringing to the forefront issues that are affecting women's lives throughout the world. Through essays, various literary pieces and films, we will examine how dichotomies that are usually identified in feminist discourse take on a renewed life as increased interconnectedness that comes with globalization shapes religious, economic, cultural and political issues.
Attributes: Women's & Gender Studies

WGST 5716 - Dismantling Oppression: Exploring Equity & Inclusion
Credit(s): 3 Credits
The course is an examination of social justice activities that seek to expose barriers created towards a realization of a more equal and just society. The focus is on differences and similarities in the experiences, needs and beliefs of people and includes perspectives on discrimination and oppression based on race, gender, class, age, sexual orientation, ethnicity, mental and physical disability, and/or spiritual orientation. This course focuses on human diversity within the context of anti-oppression framework in social work. Course also addresses how group membership affects access to resources, services and opportunities and relates to risk factors for specific population groups. (Offered in Fall)
Attributes: Women's & Gender Studies

WGST 5720 - Citizenship and Social Difference
Credit(s): 3 Credits
This course will examine several aspects of the embodied nature of citizenship. Looking specifically at the interplay between citizenship (as an identity, legal status, and practice) and socially constructed identities predicated upon perceived bodily differences (gender, race, and disability), we will examine the following preliminary questions: Historically, how and why has the American state denied women, people of color, and people with disabilities citizenship status? Should civil, social, and political rights, which are contingent upon citizenship status, be universal rights, or group-differentiated rights? How should we expand/amend conventional definitions of citizenship and political participation to account for the lived experiences of women, people of color, and people with disabilities? How do social constructed and maintained inequalities –via sexism, racism, and ableism– influence the practice of citizenship? Overall, this course will attempt to integrate the insights from feminist theory, critical race theory, and disability studies into an analysis of what it means to be an American citizen.
Attributes: Women's & Gender Studies
